

How to read an entry — Böhrtlingk & Roth, Sanskrit-Wörterbuch (PWG, 1855–1875)

A specimen page after the model of Duden’s Deutsches Universalwörterbuch entry-anatomy spread: real entries, re-typeset from the Cologne digital text, with every microstructural element labelled. Entries: the four homographs of heman (with derivatives) and the root √cumb.

Headword in Devanāgarī , exactly as printed — no transliteration is given in PWG (here hemán ‘impulse’)	1. हेमन् (von 1. हि) m. Antrieb : अस्य प्रेषा हेमनां पूयमानः RV. 9,97,1. nach SAY. Gold ; aus dieser Stelle vielleicht die Bed. Wasser geschlossen NAIGH. 1,12. — Vgl. आशु°.

Homograph numbers distinguish identically spelt but etymologically distinct words — four different heman follow one another	3. हैमन् = हेमन्त UJJVAL. zu UNĀDIS. 3,129. nur loc. हेमन् Winters TS. 2,6,1,1. TBR. 1,4,10,10. KĀTH. 36,6. ŚAT. BR. 1,5,4,5. 11,2,7,32. — Vgl. हैमन.
Etymology in parentheses : derived from homograph 1 of the root hi ‘to impel’	4. हेमन् m. = हेम der Planet Mercur TRIK. 1,1,93.
Grammatical gender (m. = masculine; the following homographs show n. and adj.)	हेमनं adj. von (wohl 2.) हेमन् gāṇa पामादि zu P. 5,2,100.
German gloss in italics — PWG defines in German (Antrieb ‘impulse’)	हेमनाभि m. Goldnabe : रथनेमिमणिं हेमनाभिं वा बध्नाति KAUS. 16.
Commentators’ dissent recorded : Sāyaṇa glosses the word as ‘gold’ in this passage	हेमनेत्र m. N. pr. eines Yakṣa (goldäugig) MBH. 2,398.
Citation with exact locus : RV. 9,97,1 = R̥gveda, maṇḍala 9, hymn 97, verse 1 — every sense is documented from the literature
Sense numbering 1) 2) 3) 4) inside one homograph
Run-on citations : the repeated source is abbreviated away — ‘1,81’ silently continues HALĀY.
Variant reading from a specific edition (the Calcutta edition of the Mahābhārata)
Accent distinguishes homographs : hé-man ‘winter’ (udātta on the first syllable) vs. hemán above — the stroke position is lexically significant
Usage restriction : attested only in the locative case (‘in winter’)
Indian grammatical apparatus : membership in a gāṇa (Pāṇini’s word-lists) is part of the lexical record
Compounds follow as separate entries : hema-nābhi ‘gold-nave’, with a full quotation showing the word in context
N. pr. = nomen proprium; a Yakṣa named ‘Gold-Eye’ — proper names are glossed etymologically in parentheses

D. 34,4. 62,5.	Present stem with accent (cúmbati) given right after the root — the udātta stroke marks the tone
	Poetic examples quoted in full : ‘(he) kissed her softly on the cheek’ (Harivaṃśa 8745)
	√ marks a verbal root — the root article is the anchor of the verbal system (√ cumb ‘to kiss’)
	Dhātupāṭha reference (11,39): the Indian root-list defines class and meaning; Western and Indian lexicography meet here
	Voice and derived-stem labels : med. = middle voice, caus. = causative (‘to let kiss’), each with its own attestations so v. a. (‘so viel als’) introduces an extended meaning: ‘to touch with the mouth’ — of two conches blown like a kiss Prefixed verbs nest inside the root article : — pari ‘to kiss all over’ (a bee kissing the mango blossom), then — vi ; the dash repeats the root
	v. I. = varia lectio, a variant reading in the Dhātupāṭha tradition itself

How to use this page

The column re-typesets entries from the digital PWG text (Cologne, csl-orig v02) in the layout of the printed original; each label explains one element of the entry architecture. PWG (the ‘large Petersburg dictionary’, 1855–1875, 7 vols.) is the foundational dictionary of Western Sanskrit philology: German definitions, Devanāgarī lemmata, exhaustive citations with exact loci, and the Indian grammatical tradition (Dhātupāṭha, gāṇas, commentators) built into every article. Column captions give the print locus (volume–column) encoded as <pc> in the digital record.
